Biology: Alligator The alligator is a large reptile that is found in swamps and in brackish marshes, where it lives in cool, muddy water, and spends most of the year in a semi-aquatic state. Adults are found in much the same locations as juveniles, but mature individuals tend to live further up river systems. Alligators are naturally predators. They feed on fish and aquatic insects. They also like to eat snakes. Eggs usually hatch in late May and June and the young leave the nest soon after. If threatened, the alligator is capable of and can swim very quickly to escape. It is fairly docile, but is still very dangerous and poses a serious threat if scared or cornered. good Leave me good, leave me fast, if I'd only got your eyes. Perhaps that is the most common line and perhaps it is a lie, but one is not sure. The old guard at Bing Crosby included at least one reference to it, which was a source of great amusement in the 1960's and a source of great irritation in the decade before, with Crosby singing it to the point of being incomprehensible in the 1948 movie White Christmas. Why this song in the second slot? There are no obvious indications why it was selected except to cite the closeness of its "anytime at all" theme to the time of year that it was selected. The 7/22 deadline for submissions was June 21, 1944 and the song was released on July 14th, four days later. In addition to the birthday song, there were two other songs that were originally written for the movies: "You'll Never Walk Alone" and "The Last Time I Saw Paris". The first was used as the theme for The King and I and the second for Since You Went Away. The switch to the standard in the post-war era was probably not coincidental. However, the 19th century was filled with Jewish melodies that were used in films from the silent era all the way through the 1970s as theme songs. These songs are still popular today. The Jewish music of my personal favorite film composer, Ernst Toch, particularly "O du fromen" and "Stein ist so schön" from Parsifal, are my favorites of the lot. There are other classics as well, such as "Ein furthesinu" from Alexander Nevsky, "Habemus
